CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

CITY OF CHICAGO

OFFICE OF THE MAYOR

RICHARD J. DALEY
MAYOR

Down through the years, the city of Chicago — heartland of the Midwest and the “nation’s most exciting city” — has attracted and encouraged artists and inspired artistic talent and the result has been an important contribution to our cultural growth and development.

The Art Institute, artists’ organizations, clubs devoted to the stimulation of creative art, our art galleries, and our many schools and academies for the arts, have all played a significant role in this development.

The No-Jury Exhibition is an impressive demonstration not only of our city’s present artistic vigor, but of our community’s sensitivity to new ideas. As Mayor, I share the pride of our people generally in the artistic leadership which gives recognition to the great and varied talents of the many artists who live and create in Chicago.

Chicago has long been the home of creative art, and as Mayor I believe strongly in lending my support to all of the cultural endeavors in our community. It is in this spirit that the city has joined with the artists and the Art Institute of Chicago in helping to arrange this exhibition for the artists of Greater Chicago.

RICHARD J. DALEY
MAYOR

THE 1957 CHICAGO ARTISTS NO-JURY EXHIBITION is probably the largest exhibition of art ever held in the mid-west. It was open to all artists, residing in Illinois within 100 miles of Chicago, without the limitations imposed by jury selection. It is unique in several respects: it has the recognition and support of the Art Institute, the major art museum in the mid-west; it offers prizes totaling $8,825, contributed by the Art Institute, and awarded by a distinguished jury of awards; and the Art Institute is selecting its next annual Chicago and Vicinity Exhibition from the works on display.

Represented in the exhibition are artists of all schools of thought and all degrees of prominence, from recognized leaders in the contemporary art world to those who pursue their art careers in their spare time. Exhibitions such as this bring recognition to all artists by the public, which, in the final analysis, is the most important of all art juries.

The extraordinary response of Chicago artists to the invitation to exhibit is conclusive proof of the need for no-jury exhibitions, and for a permanent municipal gallery in which these exhibitions may be held.

I wish to thank Mayor Richard J. Daley for his interest in the exhibition and for his sympathetic understanding of the problems facing the creative artists of our city. I wish also to thank the Art Institute, its Board of Trustees and staff, the distinguished group of ladies and gentlemen who served on our committees, and the participating artists and art organizations who have made possible this splendid demonstration of art in a democratic society.

Most of the works in this exhibition are for sale. Interested persons may obtain information by applying to the sales force or information clerk in the galleries.

The paintings in this exhibition are hung in alphabetical order beginning with the letter "K" which was chosen by lot. Within the limits of this plan, some adjustments were made to insure the best possible display.

Sculpture is displayed in accordance with available space for best presentation. A more loosely organized alphabetical plan was followed.
